

Collaborative Working

Collaborative planning is a by-product of collaborative working, something we all do, every day. Don't we?

There are numerous benefits for working and planning collaboratively. From a task perspective the solution is a shared one that is owned by every contributor. A strong by-product is that knowledge gets shared across departments, organisations or colleagues – this in itself creates a learning environment that is enjoyable and productive.

We design collaborative systems that are tailored to meet its specific needs; every organisation's eco-system is fluid and requires an evolving approach.

In our experience, one of the biggest challenges facing an organisation is ensuring that information, data and decisions are escalated in a consistently. We focus on ensuring the roles and responsibilities of the actors involved, the methods of communication, escalation channels and the timelines are clearly defined.

A collaborative process we successfully installed for a major infrastructure project

For further information visit www.aspen-global.co.uk

Collaborative Planning & Control Process

